

like - don't like

These are used to demonstrate that you are fond of or not fond of something:

I like coffee, but I don't like tea.
I like ice cream, but I don't like milk.

likes - doesn't like

These are used to demonstrate that someone else is fond of or not fond of something:

Joe likes cats, but he doesn't like dogs.
Eva doesn't like dresses, but she likes trousers.

This is how you form the plural:

boy	boys
parrot	parrots
monkey	monkeys
apple	apples
toe	toes

singular + s

Careful:

If there is a consonant in front of the „y“, the plural is formed by adding ies:

story	stories
strawberry	strawberries
lolly	lollies

singular: y -> plural: ies

If a word ends in „ch, x, s, sh“, the plural is formed by adding es:

class	classes
box	boxes
inch	inches
toothbrush	toothbrushes

singular + es

like - likes - don't - doesn't

Toni likes bananas, but he doesn't like oranges.
I _____ sweet_, but _____ like chocolate.
The monkey _____ ice cream and loll____.
Nora _____ reading, but she _____ like comic_.
I _____ apple juice, but I _____ like orange juice.
The cat _____ like fish, but _____ bird_.
I _____ like school uniform_.
Toni _____ like coffee, but I _____ it.

