

like / would like

What's the difference?

like = fancy, prefer, to be fond of

- Questions are formed using do/does:

Do you like apple juice?

Does she like pizza?

- Negations are formed by adding don't/doesn't:

I don't like apple juice.

She doesn't like pizza.

would like ('d like) = subjunctive

- Questions are formed by repositioning „would like“:

Would you like to learn English?

Would he like to go to cinema?

- Negations are formed by adding „n't" to end of „would“:

I wouldn't like to learn English.

He wouldn't like to go to the cinema.

How would you begin the following sentences?

Do you like or Would you like?

Do you like American films?

Would you like a glass of apple juice?

Do you like classical music?

Do you like wine?

Would you like to see that film on TV?

Would you like a glass of wine?

Would you like to listen this song?

Would you like a cup of coffee?

Do you like fish?

Do you like jeans?

Would you like to go to the station?

Would you like some carrots?

Would you like to live in Australia?

